Pure Linen Skirts, with new corded to her daughter, Miss Hattie A. Trund e, who is now dead, under the will of Adolph Sutro, the millionaire of San Francisco, Cal. The story of Miss Trun-dle's connection with the Sutro family began twenty years ago. Miss Trundle was travelling in the West, and met Europe, where she died of a broken heart in 1831. When Sutro died last August his will was found to contain, it is said, a bequest to Miss Hattle A. Trundle, of Winchester, Va., for $5,000, "as a slight reparation for a great wrong done her." Miss Trundle's remains were afterwards brought to this city and interred in the Sacred Heart Cemetery. Her mother, Mrs. Mary R. Trundle, as her daughter's heir, now seeks to obtain the bequest. Shortly after Sutro's death certain alleged heirs contested the will, but a compromise was effected Mrs. Trundle was not a party to the suit, and hence did not participate in the compromise.

Another arrest was made yesterday afternoon in the Charles Cooper robbery case, for which Harry M. Anderson and John and Thomas Morrison, three respectable young men of this city, are in jail. The last man arrested is William Heffin, an aged resident of Winchester, at whose house Thomas Morrison boarded. Heffin was arrested us accessory before the fact of the crime. It is alleged that he had worked for Cooper, the reed the first of the crime. It is alleged that he had worked for Cooper, the regel victim of the robbery, on his farm, about thirty miles west of this city, in Hampshire country, W. Va. He, therefore, knew that Cooper always kept a large sum of money in the house, and it is alleged that he told the three men under arrest of the hiding place and planned the robbery.
